Date& Time :29/3/23 ,7.30PM-8.30PM

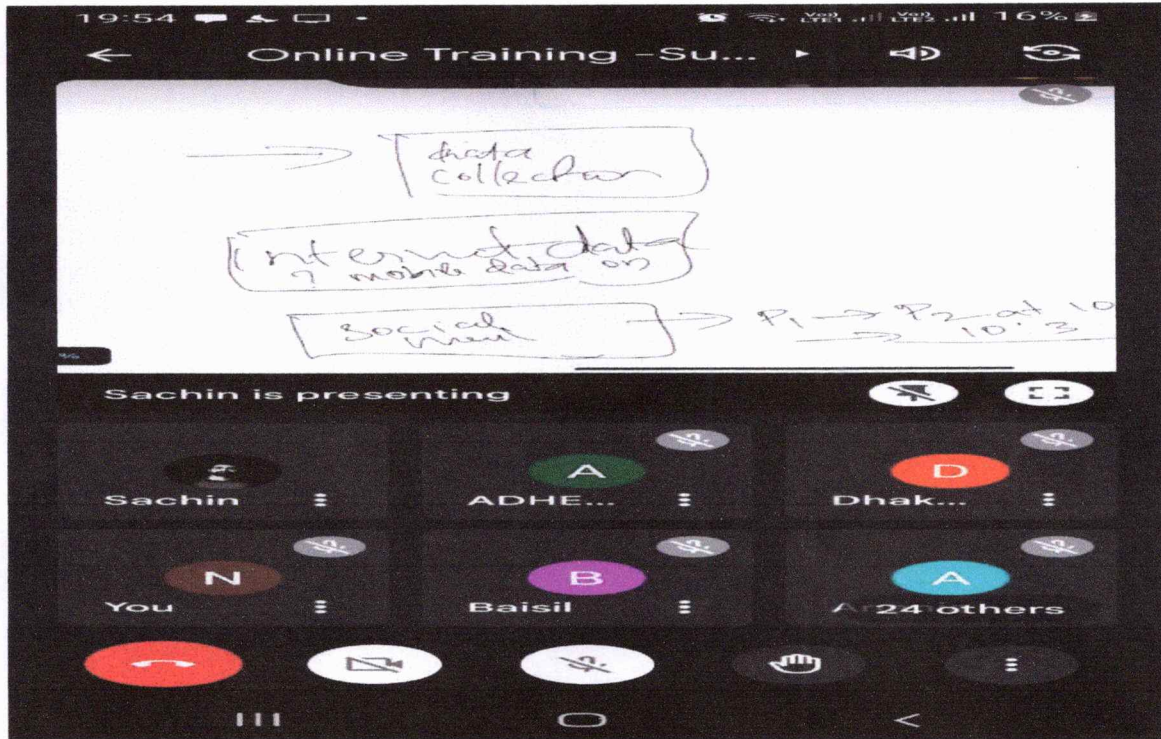

In the session the speaker discussed about the basic concepts about Supervised learning . A case study on “Predicting the survival of Titanic passengers “ using Decision tree classifier is also explained with the help of Python and the titanic dataset available from the Kaggle.After collecting data set ,preprocessing of the data is performed and extracted only relevant data or information from the set.Then out of 887 rows of data, some of the data is trained and a model is constructed .Based on the trained data, test data makes prediction and the decision tree algorithm gives an accuracy of 74%. If we want to improve the accuracy ,change the features selected to train the data.He explained about confusion matrix and several other performance metrics.
